Why Have a "Psych" Congress on Radicalization?

The organization of the "Psych" Congress on Radicalization is an initiative of the Centre d'étude des radicalisations et de leurs traitements (CERT – Center for the Study of Radicalizations and their Treatments, Paris Diderot University), which has received support from the main French organizations of psychiatrists and psychologists: the Syndicat des Psychiatres d'Exercice Public (SPEP – Association of Public Sector Psychiatrists), the Syndicat National des Psychologues (SNP – National Association of Psychologists), the Fédération Française de Psychiatrie (FFP) and the Fédération Française des Psychologues et de Psychologie (FFPP).

The French Ministry of Solidarity and Health and the Administration of the Inter-Ministerial Committee on Preventing Delinquency and Radicalization (SG-CIPDR) support the project and have proposed inscribing it in the National Radicalization Prevention Plan (Measure 37).

One requirement of the partnership between civil society and the state is avoiding a confusion of roles by preserving participants' critical freedom. This partnership has been forged with a specific goal in mind.

The purpose of this conference is to provide an assessment of current "psych" knowledge, to share the results of various experiments and experiences, and to help enable the emergence of new approaches to treating a complex problem. The decision to use the image of a man's shadow in front of a maze-like path as the poster for the congress indicates the difficulty of the task. But difficulty is no justification for over-simplification, nor does it allow us to obscure the issues. Instead, difficulty demands complexity, as long as it takes the trouble to provide both intelligibility and the possibility of expressing the limits of our understanding relative to current knowledge.

The "psych" world – psychiatrists, psychologists, and psychoanalysts – has been called to the front lines in a period that has unleashed terrorist violence, and that is far from over: both to tend to the victims and to consider what motivates that violence, as well as to work towards de-radicalization by redirecting those who defend its ideological justification. Those who have answered that call are numerous and diverse; the vast majority are cautious and aware of the need to leave room for other players and for researchers from other fields. The reports they will offer this assembly are the result of constructions imposed by the ordeals of the past three years, ordeals that, due to the combined effects of fear and safety measures, have changed numerous facets of our everyday lives.

It is foreseeable that this assessment will not be a moment of pure harmony and consensus. With over 90 speakers, both convergences and divergences are bound to appear. They should contribute to shedding light on the world we live in, with what has become known as "radicalization" or "radicality," with its implicit meaning of deadly violence, whatever the ideas that attempt to justify it are.

Organizing Committee

- Fethi Benslama: director of CERT; president of the "Psych" Congress Organizing Committee
- Representatives of the Ministry of Solidarity and Health/SG-CIPDR
- Sylvie Blumenkrantz: coordinator of the "Psych" Congress on Radicalization
- Jean-Jacques Bonamour du Tartre: psychiatrist; president of the Fédération Française de Psychiatrie (FFP)
- Jacques Borgy: psychologist; secretary-general of the Syndicat National des Psychologues (SNP)
- Sabine Choquet: researcher at the CRIEC (UQAM); secretary-general of CERT
- Tamara Guénoun: clinical psychologist; associate professor, Lyon Lumière University 2
- Thierry Lamote: clinical psychologist; associate professor, deputy director of CERT
- Laurie Laufer: director of the Centre de Recherche psychanalyse, médecine et société (CRPMS – Psychoanalysis, Medicine & Society Research Center)
- Gladys Mondière: co-president of the Fédération Française des Psychologues et de Psychologie (FFPP)
- Catherine Pinson-Guillaume: clinical psychologist; psychoanalyst
- Hassan Rahioui: psychiatrist; head of Service VII, Sainte Anne Hospital
- Richard Rechtman: psychiatrist; psychoanalyst; senior professor, EHESS (School for Advanced Studies in the Social Sciences)
- Giorgia Tiscini: clinical psychologist; lecturer, Paris Diderot University
- Michel Triantafyllou: psychiatrist; president of the Syndicat des Psychiatres d'Exercice Public (SPEP – Association of Public Sector Psychiatrists)

➤ How was the Program Composed?

The following principles guided the composition of the program:

- Invitations were sent to the heads of known radicalization-prevention programs and to psychologists and psychiatrists with recognized experience related to extremist behaviors who have published work or organized seminars or other events on the topic.
- A Call for Papers, distributed to 10,000 practitioners, received over a hundred abstracts.
- A rigorous selection was performed by the organizing committee, based on the criteria that the papers must be rooted in clinical practice and aimed at transmitting knowledge based on that practice.
- All together, over 90 speakers will be included in the Congress's program.

➤ Charter of the "Psych" Congress on Radicalization

This charter provides a framework for the "Psych" Congress on Radicalization that aims to insure the conditions necessary to an assessment of the current state of knowledge and practices in the field of violence prevention.

- This is not a symposium, but an exceptional assembly representing a very large number of professionals. The purpose of this Congress is to forward knowledge about treatment for a phenomenon that threatens individuals' lives, rights and freedom, and democratic society. Over the course of the last few years, violent radicalization has been at the root of murderous acts that have caused hundreds of casualties in France, and thousands around the world.

- The speakers agree to provide clear information, transmit enlightened experience, and to contribute to sharing knowledge and training resources.

- They will communicate in a way that is both concise and understandable by everyone involved, and strictly respect the limit of 20 minutes per presentation, followed by a 20-minute discussion period at the end of each session. They will provide the elements necessary for a debate that respects a multiplicity of points of view. They will also answer the questions that will be published on CERT's website.

- A committee of auditors will present a first draft of proposals drawn from the various presentations after the president's concluding remarks. This committee's work will ultimately be published.

- Speakers will provide a written contribution for the Proceedings within a month following the Congress, in accordance with the editorial guidelines that will be transmitted to them.

- The Congress will be filmed, pending consent from participants, who may opt to be recorded only. The full audio and video record will be available on CERT's website.

➤ Sequence

Welcome and registration

Please come to the reception office upon arrival, with a valid photo I.D. (national I.D., passport, driver's license or professional I.D.).

Registration opens at 1:30 P.M. on November 7, and at 8 A.M. on November 8, 9 and 10.

Access is reserved to registered participants only.

The badge is mandatory within the "Psych" Congress on Radicalization.

Anyone enrolled in continuing education must sign in upon arrival.

Sessions and questions from the audience

Sessions will begin precisely as scheduled. Therefore, please plan to arrive at the auditorium a few minutes early. Simultaneous French/English and English/French translation will be provided on November 8, 9 and 10. The large number of presentations will not leave time for Q&A with the audience. However, devices will be provided at the entrance that will allow attendees to ask questions that will be sent to a server and displayed on-screen at the auditorium when the discussant(s) take the floor, and will also be published on CERT's website. Speakers will answer them on the site.

#EGPSY2018

We welcome your reactions to and comments on the "Psych" Congress via #EGPSY2018.

Prologue

The prologue provides time for discussion between social-science researchers and psychoanalysis-based practitioners and researchers about their respective approaches to radicalization.

The idea is to indicate each field's contribution to the approach to the phenomenon and potentially to its treatments, as well as the ways in which they collaborate with other disciplines.

As with many crucial issues, radicalization requires various fields of human and social sciences to engage in intense interactions. It also leads to hybrid creations between branches of knowledge in areas where new phenomena resist intelligibility.

The Center for the Study of Radicalizations and their Treatments (CERT)

The Centre d'étude des radicalisations et de leurs traitements (CERT – Center for the Study of Radicalizations and their Treatments) is a resource/center about radicalization. Its mission is to develop interfaces between researchers, practitioners and decision-makers in the public sphere.

It is an inter-disciplinary center in the Humanities, Sciences and Societies Institute at Paris Diderot University, in partnership with the Fondation de la Maison des Sciences de l'Homme (FMSH – House of Human Sciences Foundation). It provides a place for exchanges and collaboration for conducting research and projects aimed both at preventing violence and at leaving it behind. It builds and implements tools for analyzing programs and individual situations. It publicizes the work of researchers and of those working in the field, as well as the results of national and international experiences, experiments, and documentation. One of the Center's specificities is a clinical approach that is open to other disciplines. Part of a broader international dynamic, it collaborates with numerous research laboratories around the world.

It provides institutions and the public sector with access to:

- Pluridisciplinary consultations for teams dealing with radicalized persons: both case studies and advice and training are available. Support for initiating and organizing research-actions about radicalization.
- Tools for approaching radicalization on an individual, case-by-case basis.
- Analyses based on self-evaluation of operators' case-management experiences.
- The study of prevention programs adapted to institutions and the environment.
- A network of practitioners and researchers for meetings and exchanges of knowledge and practices.

➤ CERT is composed of several thematic working groups uniting researchers and practitioners:

- Radicalization and Prison
- Radicalization clinic and case studies
- An individual approach to radicalized persons
- From radicalization to performing violent acts
- Evaluating prevention measures

➤ CERT proposes several interdisciplinary programs:

- One University degree:
  - Radicalization and terrorism
- Two professional training programs:
  - Subjective resources and clinical approach
  - History and genesis of terrorism and extremisms
